No works of the imagination, of the same extent, have ever been received with so great favor as the Waverley Novels.

Since their first publication not fewer than a Hundred and Twenty Thousand copies have been sold in Great Britain, and at least as many in the United States.

These heve been printed in a variety of forms to suit the taste of the public; but there has long been wanted an edition which shall selbine the advantages of portable size, readable type and unitermity with other standard English authors.

We have now in press a new Library Edition in 15mo, form, easy to hold during perusal, printed on plain and elegant clear type cast for the purpose, and fine paper; containing all the latest corrections of the author, with some curious additions, especially in Guy Mannering and the Bride of Lemmermoor; with vinneties engraved in the first style, after paintings by the most enumes, and will be soid at 75 cents each. The first two volumes, containing "Waverley," will shortly appear. The other novels will follow in rapid succession. TickNOR & FELDIS.
